Yesterday I bumped into Sara on my way to work. We decided to go for a coffee. She was looking slightly green around the gills₁. She told me she was working long hours without visible effects, so I thought that she had burned herself out₂. I asked about it, but she only vaguely admitted that she was a bit under the weather₃ that day. I couldn't really believe that, because since I had remembered she had been very active and as fit as a fiddle₄. Then she admitted that she would soon be alive and kicking₅ again and, furthermore, she would feel on the top of the world₆. I finally understood she is in a family way₇ and I wholeheartedly congratulated her.
